RESURRECTION RESIDUE

ELMHURST
CHRISTIAN REFORMED CHURCH

April 29, 2018

TODAY

We continue our deep look at 1 Corinthians 15 by honing in on verses 20-28, 34. We'll hear how as believers, we are in two different lines or queues (hence the sermon title "Res-queue." We stand in line behind Adam and Eve as sinners, flawed folks, mortals who will die. However, we also are queued up behind Jesus himself, who is sinless, flawless, immortal, and eternal. In our text for the morning, Paul describes Jesus' ultimate work to bring all things subject to God together in perfect unity. We can catch glimpses of this beautiful unity through the eyes of faith.

NEXT WEEK

In 1 Corinthians 15:35-49, Paul describes how the resurrection works. Like a flower that doesn't bear any resemblance to the seed from which it grew, so our eternal bodies and selves will not simply be an improved version of our current selves. Instead, they will be transformed into something other. As we continue our Resurrection Residue series with "Resemblance," we'll discover hints of this transformation in Jesus himself. After all, Jesus was able to walk through walls, defy the apparent "laws" of space and time, and then ascend to heaven. It is humbling to think that we currently exist in seed form, and glorious to consider what we might become through the power of God. This is a Family Sunday with identical services in which we will celebrate the Sacrament of Communion.
